...Personalized With DiapersBaby I Believe in My Three Year Old November 12, 2008 Oh dear baby boy, I know that you don't quite understand yet all that you mean to us. Like most toddlers you have a preference for your "peeps", and yet like most toddlers you need to be taught and see the value of what they are teaching you. You take everything as it comes to you in this world. You don't really do things on purpose. You do what you see. You don't really understand the concept of giving anything away, including your own body. You don't really want to share anything with anyone. This means that we have to work a bit harder to teach you about boundaries and how not everyone is allowed in your space. You don't understand that you don't have to share or make choices until you want to. You are very impulsive and you want what you want when you want it, and you don't think much about the consequences. But we are not done teaching you about the value of giving as yet. I believe you are turning three in about two weeks and you should be ready to start sharing your toys and requests around. You are a very smart boy and we know that you can do it. We just need to take baby steps and start teaching you boundaries. Let me show you what I mean. I am taking a knitting project off your needles and a ball of yarn out of your hands right now. I can't wait for you to see how fun it is to knit your own sock and then seeing it as a sock for you to wear. I can't help you to understand more about the idea of taking risks and stepping outside of what you can see around you. You are not as independent as you should be just yet, but I do want you to walk, and while you are walking you should be experimenting with other people and things, not just walking to another room. I want you to learn more about sharing, giving, taking and being kind. I want you to learn and understand the power of the words "No". I want you to practice that with your baby sister. I want you to be like your big brother, who when asked 6a5afdab4c
