The only thing that I'm sure of when I played these for myself (and some friends) is that it's a lot of fun. Don't be put off by the big platform, it might feel really heavy, but once it's pushed down off your shoulders it's much lighter! I can't offer too much advice beyond the "just give it a go", but I have to say it's very satisfying when it all works out in the end and you're sitting there with a massive smile on your face and all the little details are working together. The basic aspects of building a platform have been covered, but a few other things are worth mentioning. Artificial Intelligence can really help in the crafting of environments, it can help to build things that are balanced in terms of size, weight, etc. Much of my experience with writing AI algorithms relates to how pathfinding algorithms work, there's quite a few ways that you can approach the problem, and all of them have tradeoffs in terms of efficiency, effectiveness, and clarity of results. Early Environment Feedback works very well, I've heard that 04aeff104c
