The device will become available through T-Mobile retail stores starting on May 8 in Germany, and cost €500. Thanks to the Snapdragon 710 and its 5G capabilities, the Novo M5 is able to provide users with a faster internet experience, T-Mobile says. It's only missing a few features like the display notch and Android One branding, and is built around the Android P software. The Novo M5's display is much larger than those of its predecessor, the Novo 7, with a 6.4-inch Full HD+ display with 19.5:9 aspect ratio and Corning Gorilla Glass 5 protection. It supports a 20MP selfie camera and features a 3,500mAh battery with rapid charging support. The device can reach download speeds of up to 1.4Gbps (4G LTE network) or up to 1.3Gbps (5G) and upload speeds of up to 300Mbps. There's 4GB or 6GB of RAM for Android devices, and the base model runs 64GB of storage (expandable up to 128GB). The Novo M5 will cost €500 (around $530/£420), but the company has also introduced a trade-in program that lets customers save 50 percent of the base price if they buy an eligible device. T-Mobile also announced that all existing owners of the Novo 7 will receive a free Duo Dual SIM, which allows users to keep their personal data on two SIM cards in one phone. T-Mobile is the first company to launch a 5G network in Germany, and it plans to extend this coverage
